GRAMMAR

since, for

Use since to say that something started at a point in time in the past, and is or was still continuing:

- He has been living in Leeds since 1998.
- We've known about it since May.

Since is usually followed by a time expression ('last year', 'this morning', '4 o'clock' etc) or by a clause in the simple past tense. Use the present perfect or the past perfect in the other clause:

- He had been seriously ill since Christmas.
- I have loved movies since I first went to the cinema.
- ▶ Speakers of British English usually say it is a long time/two weeks etc since ..., and speakers of American English it has been a long time/two weeks etc since ..., but both uses are correct:
- It's weeks (BrE)/It's been weeks (AmE) since I saw Grandma.

Use for when you state the length of time that something has been or had been happening:

• We have known each other for ten years (NOT since ten years).

THESAURUS

- because conjunction used when giving the reason for something: I went home because I was tired. | The streets were flooded because of all the rain.
- due to/owing to preposition used to give the reason why something has happened. Due to and owing to are more formal than because: The delay was due to a problem with the ship's engines. | The parade had to be cancelled owing to bad weather.
- through preposition because of something. Through is used especially when saying why someone succeeded or failed to do something: They won the game, more through luck than skill. I You failed that test through carelessness.
- thanks to preposition used when explaining that something good has happened because of someone's efforts, or because something exists: Thanks to modern medicine, the disease can now be cured.
- since/as conjunction used when giving the reason why someone decides to do something or decides that something is true: We decided to go to the beach since it was a nice day. | I thought Kevin was out as his car wasn't there.

• out of preposition because of a particular feeling or quality: He started reading the book out of curiosity. | I only asked out of politeness.
