

- [inˈtruːsɪv] a
1. вторгающийся, незванный

2. назойливый, навязчивый, докучливый

3. геол. интрузивный, плутонический

4. вдающийся (о бухте, заливе и т. п.)

intrusive

Oxford Advanced Learners Dictionary 8th Ed.

in·tru·sive

[intrusive]

BrE

[ɪnˈtruːsɪv]

NAmE

[ɪnˈtruːsɪv]

adjective

1.

too noticeable, direct, etc. in a way that is disturbing or annoying

• intrusive questions

• The constant presence of the media was very intrusive.

2.

(phonetics) (of a speech sound) produced in order to link two words together when speaking, for example the /[r] / sound produced at the end of law by some English speakers in the phrase ‘law and order’. Intrusive ‘r’ is not considered part of standard English.

Example Bank:

• Planning permission was refused on the grounds that the proposed building would be ‘visually intrusive’.

• The proposed building would be visually intrusive.

• I don't like their intrusive sales methods.

• I've had enough of your intrusive questions.

• Some of the islanders found the presence of the film crew too intrusive.

intrusive

Longman DOCE 5th Ed. (En-En)

in·tru·sive

/ɪnˈtruːsɪv/

BrE

AmE

adjective

affecting someone’s private life or interrupting them in an unwanted and annoying way:

They found the television cameras too intrusive.

intrusive

Freakuency Pack

12500

9175

MCW

15000

7260

COCA

RANGE:

10k

INTRUSIVE

1467

intrusive

1351

intrusiveness

106

intrusively

10

COCA 500k Unlemmatized

1042

17445

1351

jj